DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 5 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by U.S. Publication No. US 2003/0143725 A1 (Chen et al.).

The U.S. Publication claims priority to provisional document 60/216,265, filed July 6, 2000 which provides basis for the Chen et al. publication and antecedes the filing date (September 26, 2000) of the foreign priority document claimed under 35 U.S.C. 119 by the instant application.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claim 11 is considered to be allowable over the prior art of record. The capillary bundles of the Chen et al. publication are used as conduits for probes to be immobilised to a substrate. There is no teaching or suggestion of using the capillaries as a substrate and accordingly no reason for immobilizing a linker to the capillary. The remaining references cited are considered to be generally related to the claimed invention.

As allowable subject matter has been indicated, applicant's reply must either comply with all formal requirements or specifically traverse each requirement not complied with. See 37 CFR 1.111(b) and MPEP § 707.07(a).
